On the other hand, since the output power is reduced when the measurement time is shortened, the measurement time cannot be shortened. As a result, it is difficult to measure the output power. Moreover, it is known that, in the nonlinear optical device described in Applied Physics Letters Vol. 81, No. 1, pp. 23-25, 2001, the output power is measured by scanning the nonlinear optical device with the light beam whose intensity is modulated so as to be successively increased by an arbitrary level. In such an optical power measurement method using the nonlinear optical device, when the light beam whose intensity is modulated is scanned over the surface of the nonlinear optical device to be successively increased to have a high intensity, the amount of light beam incident on the optical device element within the scan region is reduced. As a result, the measurement accuracy is reduced. Q: oracle 10g: select * from dual I need to write a procedure to download a report for each web-shop customer. the number of customers is quite large. I'd like to create a temporary table (say all_customers) so I can use a INSERT statement. SELECT * FROM all_customers How can I write a procedure to perform this task? I'm using oracle 10g A: Look at this website, it demonstrates how to retrieve tabular data from a remote database. From it : SELECT * FROM all_customers should work. To get all the customer details from each web-shop 6d1f23a050
