To calculate planetary positions and the dates in which they will occur, you just have to enter the date in the format mm/dd/yyyy, for example. However, to get more details, you should go to the modern astrological point of view, which uses the sidereal clock, not the solar clock. What does this mean? Well, the sidereal clock has a certain rate. On January 1, it has a rate of exactly one degree per day. Its length, that is what is called the sidereal side, is about 29.5 days, because 29.5 would be the time it would take to complete one sidereal rotation (one revolution) of the moon on its own, so a day would be approximately 1 sidereal day. The opposition of the moon is exactly 29.5 days (there are 20,182 days in a year), and you can find this time by looking at the sidereal clock. The calendar that the sidereal clock uses is named after that time. The sidereal clock also has to work for zonal times, so the mean longitude of a star has to be know. This means that the position and position table of every object in the universe have to be in the order that we see them. The celestial objects rotate around our sun, the center of the solar system, just like the moon around the earth. System Requirements: Mac OS X 10.7.0 or Later More Requirements: Operating system as Microsoft Windows XP Service Pack 3 Free version of MS Office is recommendedQ: How to clear a list? my problem is that I don't know how to use the clear() function. It should be a simple function but I don't get it. I tryed two things: Clear[lst, vlst] Clear[vlst] but none of them works. So here is my problem: What should be done to remove all elements from a list? A: If you want to remove all elements from a list, use DeleteAll[]: DeleteAll[vlist]

You can also use: vlist[[All, -1]] = {}; which will first construct a new list, and then clear the old one. A: Another option is: DeleteCases[lst, x_] := x; I prefer this to replace: b7e8fdf5c8

Johannes Kepleris is a professional easy to use astrological calculation and interpretation program. It is based on classical and medieval methods and is interpreted in a modern way. Kepleris was not designed to be a purely technical problem solution tool. It was aimed for researchers, professional astrologers and people who are interested in astrology and want to have a special viewpoint on the interpretation of the horoscope. It provides tools for finding and calculating positions of planets, stars, asteroids and comets in the sky. Also the property of each object is available. This helps to find questions in the chart without analyzing the chart. Kepleris is easier than Jupiter, a big Jupiter calculator. Kepleris is a kind of astrological calculator, not a report generator or a report processor. Kepleris provides simple tables of positions and you can combine this information with the profiles of the objects in the chart. Kepleris is calculated in a traditionally way. Kepleris is not a program for showing the so-called properties of some famous chart. It shows only positions of planets and stars as it is mentioned on the Kepleris website. It is a calculator, not an interpretive program. Johannes Kepleris Plotter By Taras Samchuk Johannes Kepleris plotter is a free, open source program that shows you the sky in Julian or Gregorian (western astrology) form. It can be used for several purposes such as: - quickly find asteroids and comets in the sky - check the current positions of planets - quickly find your personal Moon sign/lunar day in the sky - see bright and dim stars/constellations - check the lunar calendar - check the moon phases - choose the right moon phase - see the position of the Moon - see the position of the Sun - see the date, time, current time zone and your local sidereal time (9 planets, moon, Sun and Moon) It gives you all of this in an interactive chart with an intuitive interface. It can be used on any Linux or Windows computer and it doesn't need an internet connection for downloading of the astrological databases. Requirements: - basic linux knowledge - java - a java capable browser To download the java version go to:
